

The project Development of skills through participatory evaluation and simulation using web tools (DevalSimWeb) continues the training for professors and students in the field of e-assessment.

On September 5 took place the ceremony for the delivery of certificates to the professors and students who completed the second edition of the Training Programs: Assessment for Learning in Higher Education (EVAPES) and Assessment and development of professional competences (EDECOM).

Both programs follow and apply the principles of e-learning-oriented evaluation. For this reason the evaluation is done through authentic tasks related to the immediate context of students, through participatory evaluation strategies. In addition, the courses provide opportunities to get feedback and feedforward throughout the programs.

In this process, the learning strategy takes advantage of the virtual campus, combining classroom assessment and e-assessment.